Plenty of Ocean.

(Philadelphia Ledger.) Colonel John S. Flaherty, manager of the Majestic theatre, says that one of the most pathetic remarks he ever heard was made by a youngster who belonged on New York's great east side. The little fellow was taken to Coney island on an outing by a charitable organization. He went down on the beach and stood for several minutes watching the waves rolling in. As far as he could see there was nothing but water, and the expanse of waves and white caps fascinated him. Hearing a deep sigh the little fellow remarked: "Well, this is the first time I ever saw enough of anything."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

(New York Press.) Generally you can tell a drinking man by the way his wife keeps bragging that he isn't. It takes a woman to know that another woman's figure is made up because it looks well. Next to one in uniform a girl loves to be most interested in a man with a flickish mustache.

You can nearly always tell when the cook is going to stir the way she will drink her own coffee. If you should mention anything before a widow she would not know what you mean any more than she would if you thought cold feet were a ground for divorce.

Why the Widower Loved Her.

(Philadelphia Telegraph.) A lady from Alexandria, Va., visiting in Philadelphia quite recently, told an anecdote of her retiring cook which is good enough to be told again: Myra, the colored cook, gave notice to Mrs. Richardson of her intention to leave at the end of the week. Mrs. R. highly prized the cook's abilities in the culinary line and proceeded to interview her in an effort to learn the reason for her departure. The following conversation ensued: "Myra, are you not satisfied with the wages and the home I give you?" "Yes, Mrs. Richardson, I am in happy wifery you all."

"Well, why do you leave?" "Say, Mrs. Richardson, don't you all member dat fun I in de next block las Friday?" "Yes, But what of that?" "Well, I done gwine to tell you all de whole truf. Ise gwine to marry de husband ob de corpse. He low as I was de life ob de fun."

Too Inquisitive.

Office Boy—The editor regrets 'e is unable to make use of the enclosed contribution for the offer of which he is much obliged.

Three Days Behind.

(Philadelphia Press.) "I heard today that your son was an undertaker. I thought you told me he was a physician." "Not at all." "I don't like to contradict, but I'm positive you did say so." "You misunderstood me. I said he followed the medical profession."
